The Dutch Power in Kerala

By M.O. Koshy

Mittal Publications, New Delhi, 1989. N.A. Book Condition: New. Xiv+334pp This book is the result of a devoted and systematic research work. It is primarily based on excellent archival material available in Dutch, English and old Malayalam languages. The author has delved deep into the original records and has come out with interesting information and interpretation differing from the writers, researchers and historians who had worked earlier, in this field and thereby he has broken a new ground in the field of historical research. The study examines the most crucial period of the Dutch power in Kerala from 1729-1758. During this period the Dutch found themselves trapped in a stormy and confused state of affairs in Kerala. The decline of trade, the challenge to their position as arbitrators in the affairs of Kerala, denial of support from the Netherlands and Batavia left them alone to face the crisis. The Dutch manoeuvred diplomatically and survived the challenges and dangers one after the other. The book begins with the advent of the Dutch sea trade with the East and presents a systematic observation of the events that led to the foundation of Dutch establishment and settlements and their relations with the rulers...
