Not illustrated. 1916 Excerpt: .juniper, Port Or ford cedar, and California bigtree proved highly durable, the junipers and arborvitaes particularly so. Investigations to determine the effect of resin in wood upon its durability made definite progress, and indications are that the results will conflict with prevailing opinions. Fungicidal Properties of Wood Preservatives. About 1900 tests on the toxic properties of wood preservatives were made during the year. The majority of substances tested were coal-tar and water-gas-tar distillates. Considerable variation was found to exist between different samples of the same substance, showing the need for standardization of the products. Studies of the ability of fungi gradually to increase their resistance to toxic agents yielded some interesting results. It was found that a 1 concentration of a certain wood preservative is sufficient to kill Fomcs annosus when the fungus is taken from a culture grown on a preservative-free media; but that when grown through four generations on gradually increasing concentrations of the preservative, a 3 concentration is required to kill it. Lumber Yard Sanitation. Further field studies were made of conditions in lumber yards to determine the extent and cause of the decay in stored timber and the relation of this to outbreaks of rot in buildings. These studies show that an exceedingly bad condition exists in many lumber yards in respect to the sanitary handling of timber. The majority of dealers do not realize the full danger in supplying infected stock to the building trades, and take few precautions to maintain...
